Čika Ljubina 18-20 | 11000 Belgrade, Serbia

Katarina Jović (b. 1994) is a research associate at the Institute of Art History. She earned her bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Belgrade's Faculty of Philosophy, Department of History of Art, where she is currently pursuing her doctoral studies. In 2017, she received the Award for exceptional academic achievements from her home university. She participated in projects funded by the Faculty of Philosophy and the Ministry of Education, Science and Technological Development of the Republic of Serbia, including Humans and Society in Times of Crisis, and Representations of Identity in Art and Verbal-Visual Culture in the Modern Period. Jović has received several scholarships, including a SYLFF Fellowship from the Tokyo Foundation for doctoral candidates, as well as a DAAD grant for a one-year research stay at the Institut für Kunst und Bildgeschichte (IKB) at Humboldt University of Berlin. During this stay, she worked on the project The Influence of German Salon Culture on Salons in the Bay of Kotor during the 19th Century. She is a member of ICOM Serbia. In addition to her teaching responsibilities in courses such as Visual Culture of Europe in the Modern Age, Art and Visual Culture of the Mediterranean World, and Architecture from the Renaissance to Postmodernism, she has contributed to the organization of the IICoA International Interdisciplinary Conference on Art and presented her research at scientific meetings both in Serbia and abroad. She is currently working on her doctoral dissertation, Visual Culture of Bourgeois Salons in the Bay of Kotor during the 19th Century. Her research adopts an interdisciplinary approach, exploring modes of representation, the relationships between different visual media, visual propaganda, interpretations of historical concepts, and memory systems within the history of art and architecture. She examines visual culture in relation to social power structures, gender roles, and colonial history.
